Pullman Chamber & Visitor Center tourism@pullmanchamber.com

Located at the junction of three streams (South Fork of the Palouse River, Missouri Flat Creek and Dry Creek) in what is now the downtown area, Pullman (first known as "Three Forks") has a rich history going back to the 1870's. First on the site was Bolin Farr from Missouri who settled on present day Park Street and later built a house there. Second was Daniel McKenzie who came in 1877 and built a small home approximately on the present-day location of the Manor Lodge on Paradise Street.

In 1881 Farr and McKenzie platted the town site. The town's application for a post office called "South Palouse" was rejected by the Post Office Department.

The next application with the town name of Pullman was accepted. One theory is that the adopted name came from George Pullman, the king of the great railroad sleeping car. When informed of the town's action, the railroad magnate reportedly donated $50 to start a city library.

Soon after, McKenzie invited Mark True to come from Moscow and establish a hotel here. The result was the Palace Hotel, located on the southeast corner of Paradise and Kamiaken Streets. The town's first artesian well was discovered while drilling a well for the hotel. These wells soon attracted newcomers to the area. Railroads came from the west and the north and the town grew and incorporated in 1888.

After Washington gained statehood in 1889, there was fierce competition among the towns east of the Cascades to be the location of the land grant college. The award went to Pullman, the "Artesian City", and the town was forever changed. The Washington State College was established on the northeast part of Pullman in 1889, opening with 21 students, and the town entered a new era. That small school is now Washington State University with branches in other parts of the state.

Pullman at a glance

With a population of over 34,000, Pullman is the pulse of the Palouse, with spectacular natural beauty surrounding its core, while offering urban amenities due to Washington State University perched above it. There is a fresh, small town feel, and the locals are welcoming and excited that you are exploring their area. Situated at an elevation of 2,346 feet, it has a mild climate, clean air and four beautiful seasons. Pullman is a great community to relocate to and to grow a business in!

ENJOY YOUR RETIREMENT HERE ON THE PALOUSE!

There are various reasons to retire in Pullman. Not only are the views breathtaking, but the quality of life is refreshing. Pullman may be a small town but it boasts the amenities of a large city. Here is why you should retire in Pullman:

High Quality of Life, with a modest cost of living.

Not only is Pullman home of WSU, it also has several startup tech companies who have chosen to grow roots right here on the Palouse! There are many rental and retirement living options, the median housing price is below the national average, there are no state income taxes and the property taxes are low.

World Class Physicians and Facilities – Pullman Regional Hospital is an award-winning critical access hospital recognized for its 5-star care and patient experience. With a comprehensive medical staff of approximately 60 primary care and specialist physicians, we provide quality care close to home. Our Emergency Department is here 24/7 and has a partnership with Life Flight Network that assures transfer to higher level acuity hospitals in Spokane and Seattle if necessary.

Numerous Cultural Offerings. Pullmanites have the option to enjoy a plethora of cultural events and activities provided by departments and clubs from WSU, as well as with the talents of our local community. Residents and visitors alike may enjoy a production at one of our theatres. A neighborhood band might take you home with classic rock at Music on Main, or a headliner like Elton John, Taylor Swift or ZZ Top could give you a night to remember at a WSU concert.

Nationally Recognized for Low-Crime Rankings. Safewise.com reported that Pullman was rated the tenth safest city in Washington in 2020. With less than 20 crimes per 1,000 people, Pullman is a community where you can feel safe.

Opportunities for Civic Engagement or even part time employment. Pullman features dozens of nonprofit organizations that are extremely active in the community. Whether your interest is baking cookies to benefit the town's 4th of July Celebration, or would prefer pouring beer at the National Lentil Festival to support a local organization such as Whitman County Humane Society, Pullman has numerous options for community minded folk.

Extensive City-wide transit and trail systems. Pullman Transit offers bus service on dozens of routes all days of the week throughout Pullman. In addition, they also operate Dial-A-Ride, a senior service with ADA integration. The trail system is great for daily walks, bike rides or even commuters! In addition, Coast Transportation will take just about anyone anywhere at just about any time (donations appreciated).

Ready, Set, Action. Retirees benefit from an extremely active Senior Citizens Association through Pullman Parks & Rec. Are you up for a bus trip to a Best of Broadway performance in Spokane? Have you been to the Peach Festival in Greenbluff? A Cowboy Supper show in Stateline? The opportunities are all around!

Pullman is business triendly

Nestled in the picturesque southeastern corner of Washington State in a region popularly known as the Palouse, the City of Pullman offers business resources to help enterprising entrepreneurs maneuver through various stages of a business lifecycle:

In the Seed Stage, the entrepreneur typically goes through business planning, legal considerations and market research to help turn an idea into a product or service.

In the Startup Phase, the business owner may be balancing various competing priorities to help make the business go.

As the hard work of planning and operating the business starts to pay off, the business owner finds itself in the Growth Phase, adding employees, launching new product lines, adding new locations or acquiring another company.

Ultimately, the business owner enters a Transition Phase in which the owner thinks about the end game, including selling the business, transitioning to a successor or winding it down entirely.

Four locally based programs worthy of consideration:

1. Business Plan Competition during Spring semester at Washington State University offers university and high school students a chance to compete for thousands of dollars to start their businesses.

- 2. Innovation Corps (I-Corps), is an 8-week program in the Fall, Spring and Summer semesters to validate the market viability of a business idea. Open to all entrepreneurs through a selection program, this NSF funded program is thriving in its third year at Washington State University.
- 3. Small Business Development Center, a federally funded program with matching funds from WSU Washington State University serves as an advisor for enterprising entrepreneurs through all stages of a business lifecycle.

4. Lastly, Startup Whitman and Southeast Economic Development offer entrepreneurs, startups and small businesses a suite of consulting, mentoring and educational programs and services designed to jump start and grow local businesses, and connect with federal, state, regional and local resources to promote economic vitality by creating and retaining jobs through business, tourism and community development.

There are many opportunities to explore the natural landscapes of the Palouse. Wiggle your toes in the sand at Illia Dunes, bike the 38 miles of paved trails or play a round of golf at one of the nearby golf courses. Grab your camera before you go because there are countless opportunities to capture that picture-perfect shot!

PHOTOGRAPHY ON THE PALOUSE

The Palouse region offers unparalleled beauty, a unique landscape, rural charm, four distinct seasons and thousands of acres with outstanding photo opportunities. Keep in mind 98% of these lands in Whitman County are privately owned and landowners are not required to post trespassing signs. Stay on the roads and off property that does not belong to you. Please also be aware of heavy farm equipment on the roads.

Photographers find late spring and early summer to be the opportune time for photographing the green hills and the golden fields of wheat. In May and late June photographers find the less stable weather provides opportunity to capture dramatic lights and skies. It is a bit more of a gamble for photographers on a tight schedule, but the payoff can be beautiful. Winter on the Palouse is often gray, but a clear sunrise over fields freshly dusted with snow can be a real prize to a photographer lucky enough to catch the right moment. This is also the best time for raptor viewing.

Feel free to share your photos with us on Facebook - @PicturePerfectPalouse!

photography tips from Alison Meyer

TIME OF YEAR Velvety green hills appear on the Palouse in late April and peak near late June, with wildflowers growing mostly on uncultivated areas during May and June. Grass fields are harvested beginning in late June to early July, and harvest of golden crops occurs around late July-early September, depending on the location and weather. Dramatic skies are typical during spring storms and often during the fall.

TIME OF DAY Generally, photographing the Palouse in the early morning or late afternoon/ early evening pro-vides the best light for showing off the shapes of hills and textures of fields and barn wood. Low side-lighting at these times creates shadows that make the hills more visible and dramatic. If you don't have much time to photograph, concentrate your efforts during these time periods.

ENCOURAGE YOUR CREATIVITY Photograph with your own creative spirit! Popular photographic locations are photographed re-peatedly — remember, the Palouse is not just about the hills! Consider farm equipment, water-ways, flora, fauna, close-ups, non-cultivated scenes, people, events, and towns.

Change your physical relationship to the landscape to see something new: crouch low to the ground, lay on your back or side, walk over a hill, get off the trail, shoot in "lousy" weather or light-ing conditions. Try breaking some photographic "rules" by using blur or low light, a cell phone camera, or creative effects. All of these things can result in unique photos.

LENSES A wide angle lens is helpful for depicting expansive landscapes. Composing your picture with an interesting foreground subject, such as a rock outcrop or flowers, will give perspective to a scene which also contains a more distant landscape. Use a small aperture to bring all parts of the scene into the best focus possible, when this is the desired effect.

Create more abstract landscape images by using a long lens to capture a narrow section of the scenery. When photographing from a distance with a long lens, the Palouse hills can appear in-terestingly compressed and rippled. If the atmosphere isn't clear, the haze lends a softness to the photo, which can be painterly and interesting.

CARRY A TRIPOD A tripod allows you to use slower shooting speeds without blur resulting from camera movement. You can then use a smaller aperture (higher f-stop), which provides greater depth of field (the ar-ea of the scene that is in focus). You won't need or want a tripod for every shot, but when you find yourself viewing gorgeous light over a broad landscape, you'll be glad you have it with you, espe-cially if you want to print very large, sharply focused photographs.

ASK PERMISSION! Returning the kindness to landowners who are welcoming to the vehicles and photographers stopped on their roadsides and driveways can go a long way toward keeping these locals amena-ble to future visits. Barns that appear abandoned, seemingly deserted homesteads, and cultivated fields in Idaho and Washington are not public domain. Get permission to enter agricultural fields and to photograph close to barns and other private property and graciously thank landowners whenever possible.

Main Street in Palouse is on the National Register of Historic Places. Palouse has one of the oldest and most beautiful city parks in the area with picnic structures, playground and outdoor swimming pool. You'll also find the Palouse RV Park. ROSALIA Steptoe Battlefield marks the location where the last Indian victory over the U.S. Army occurred in May of 1858. This historic battle with 158 mounted troops, facing between 600 and 1,200 warriors, ended with a cease-fire that gave an opportunity for Colonel Steptoe's escape back to Fort Walla Walla. Check out the Rosalia Museum for exhibits on this, as well as a meteorite that was found near Rosalia. For information on the town, stop at their Visitor's Center, which is housed in a renovated Texaco Station, originally built in 1923, and which now features an electric vehicle charging station.

TEKOA

Halfway between Spokane and Pullman on scenic highway 27, Tekoa is the perfect stop for those with a passion for photography, bicycling, golf, farming, and history. Visit the landmark art deco style Empire Theatre built in 1940. Order a latte at the coffee shop next door and then tour 3 floors of the Tekoa Museum. Stay for a meal at one of their hometown restaurants.

Photographic opportunities surround Tekoa, including the old Milwaukee Railroad Trestle, hang gliders floating off Tekoa Mountain, 1909 Old City Hall building, and nearby Steptoe Butte. You'll see a bounty of wheat, barley, lentils, and garbanzo beans in the fields. Tekoa is a thriving community that supports over 20 small businesses and an airport. For more information, or to arrange a tour of one of the landmarks, call City Hall at (509) 284-3861. Visit tekoachamber.com

COLFAX

A community that is alive with small town friendliness and serves as the county seat. Colfax was named in honor of Schuyler Colfax, who was vice president during President U.S. Grant's first administration (1869-73). James A. Perkins was cofounder and the first permanent resident of Colfax. Shortly after his arrival in 1870, he began building a log cabin in which the first Republican convention in the county was held in 1872. A visit to this charming town might include a stop at a local coffee shop or restaurant, a round of golf at the beautiful 9-hole course situated on the Palouse River, or viewing the latest art exhibit at The Center at Colfax Library.

SNAKE RIVER & WAWAWAI PARK

South

COLTON

The Colton story began in 1878 when L.J. Wolford, Roy Woodworth and Dr. Cole, being dissatisfied with the proprietor of Uniontown, decided to find a town of their own. The name came from the first three letters of Dr. Cole's last name and the last three letters of Mr. Wolford's son, Clinton. Visit St. Gall's Catholic Church built in 1905 which retains the original architecture and stained-glass windows. Schedule some target practice at the Colton Gun Club. Colton is famous for its holiday lights which can be viewed from the comfort of your car anytime in December.

UNIONTOWN

Settled by German immigrants from Minnesota in the 1870s', Uniontown offers a great experience for those who stop. When the Dahmen Barn was donated to the community in 2004, volunteers rolled up their sleeves and donated over 5,000 hours to transform the building into an artisan center. Located behind the famous fence of over 1,000 iron wagon wheels, this fully accessible facility provides studio space for artists and hosts live performances, special artist receptions and offers classes and workshops. Be sure to get up close and personal to Wheeletta Wholesteele, the larger-thanlife metal cow sculpture adjacent to the highway. Stop in and see St. Boniface Church, the first consecrated Catholic Church in the state of Washington. It houses the original five altars, statues, stained glass, stenciled décor and oil painted Stations of the Cross. Tours are available. A great stop for treasure hunting with half a dozen antique and second-hand shops. More history, details about businesses, services and events can be found at uniontown.us
